Yasin regained his sight through cataract surgery

Md. Yasin, age of 60, lives in Rabeda camp at Mirpur 11, Pallabi, Dhaka. He worked at a private bank as a guard. His family ran well with his four family members.

He suddenly feels the challenges on his eyes. After a while, he started seeing everything blurred. He could not share his problem to anybody due to fear of losing his job. Meanwhile, he started using medicine, taking suggestion from a pharmacist. But there is no improvement in his eyes. Eventually, the bank authority realised that Yasin was not looking clearly. Consequently, Yasin lost his job.

Yasin and his family fell into big crisis- how they will maintain their family expenditures, and recover Yasin’s eyes. For that moment, he had stopped his son’s studies.

At that time, household survey of BRAC is going on at Rabeda Camp. Rabeya Hossain, project staff of BRAC, was introduced to Yasin while surveying the household. Yasin discussed his crisis in detail with Rabeya. Rabeya encouraged Yasin and convinced him that treatment of BRAC Urban Healthcare and Diagnostic Centre (BUHC&DC) is standard and cost is very low.

While Yasin came to BUHC&DC, the doctor examined his eyes and decided to do cataract surgery on Yasin’s eyes. Centre Manager assured Yasin that all costs of surgery will be borne by BRAC. Yasin was included in the referral system. Then he was sent to the Prime Bank Eye Hospital for cataract surgery. Yasin’s cataract operation was successfully accomplished. New book published

BRAC Urban Development Programme has published a new book titled 'Low-cost climate resilient urban housing – BRAC's experiences' in December 2021.

This handbook showcases various examples of affordable, low-cost and climate-resilient housing, constructed with a participatory approach that is suitable for people living in slums and low-income settlements. To a large extent, this document aims to enhance the basic technical understanding of the practitioners. It will prove to be of invaluable guidance to all kinds of housing projects for low-income and vulnerable communities. We do believe government agencies, nongovernment organisations, practitioners like engineers and architects, and community groups will find it useful.
